Historical comparisons

A comparison records its evidence and limits. It is not an outcome forecast.

Institutional sequences across historical cases

Historical case	Germany, 1933: appointment and subsequent institutional changes
Documented basis	The historical reference distinguishes appointment to office from direct election to that office.
Similarities	No contemporary equivalence has been established in this comparison record.
Material differences	Jurisdiction, constitutional rules, institutions, time period and observed outcomes must be specified for each proposed comparison.
Evidence against the comparison	Cases in which similar pressures were constrained, reversed or produced different outcomes must be examined alongside the proposed case.

Emergency authority: test the mechanism, then its limits

Historical case

Germany, March 1933: a law authorized government legislation outside ordinary parliamentary procedure.

Documented basis

The Enabling Act's Articles 1–3 specify the transfer and its stated exceptions.

Similarities

A useful research question is whether a present measure bypasses ordinary lawmaking, and how institutions respond. A shared mechanism has to be proved in the specific records.

Material differences

The U.S. Constitution allocates powers separately. Rhetoric, an executive order and the 1933 legislative transfer are different acts; the authority and legal effect of each must be examined.

Evidence against the comparison

An effective judicial limit, legislative refusal, reversal or verified compliance would weaken a claim that constraints have ceased to function. A ruling alone does not establish compliance.

Next record to check

For each current controversy, join the exact instrument to the operative ruling and later compliance record. Record what would strengthen and what would disprove the proposed comparison before checking the next event.

The preserved report's forecast chapter describes its estimates as judgment, not a model output. This structured view does not assign political scores or forecast election outcomes.

How this record grows. The topic registry supplies these pages and the map filters. New evidence can suggest topics; recorded review accepts or rejects those suggestions. A source establishes only what it actually records. Historical editions and superseded claims remain accessible.
